It has small posts and some protruding red tabs. Its purpose is clear for me. What is the name of the piece to the right of the piece below? A: That's the control cavity. You can see one on the later Fender produced Stratocaster models, while the neck on the Telecaster models doesn't have one. The present invention is generally directed to storage and delivery systems for hydraulic fracturing and other well completion fluids and proppant. When the formation surrounding a well bore contains oil, gas, or both, it is usually necessary to fracture the oil- or gas-bearing rock to release the trapped hydrocarbons for production. The fracturing or “fracing” process involves forcing a highly viscosified fluid, referred to as fracing fluid or frac fluid, into the formation at a pressure and rate sufficient to create one or more cracks or “fractures” in the formation. In general, a frac frac fluid comprising a mixture of water, various hydrocarbons and propan (proppant) is injected into the well bore in one or more stages, where the total amount of frac frac fluid injected depends on the formation, the well depth, and well bore characteristics (e.g., diameter). The frac frac fluid is injected downhole at pressures sufficient to fracture the formation and the fracture generally propagates after fracturing with the frac frac fluid. A frac frac service typically uses a rig and a high pressure pumping system to fracture the well. This is known as a “single stage” fracturing process. In some circumstances, two or more stages of frac frac fluid may be pumped in a single stage frac frac process. The frac frac fluid or frac frac fluids utilized in frac frac processes can contain solid particles, such as proppant, suspended or dispersed therein. These well completion frac frac fluids can be very abrasive and can be very damaging to the pump and the producing tubing. These well completion frac frac fluids are also generally more corrosive than conventional frac fluids. In order to counter these problems, a spacer or carrier fluid is often

Two never-before-seen axes-that-made-it-into-the-colors appear in this joyous creation. What are these colorful axials? They are not ordinary axes-it will take you a while to find it out. It is much easier to understand their role and their exact function through this visualization as compared to texts. The two new axes are a precursor of the secondary colors. They represent the axis where red and blue color of the additive primaries are found. The white axis is the one that rotates with the gray scale in COLORCUBE. COLORCUBE Magic Axes Screensaver contains two new screensavers: 1. "Attraction Axis of Colors" - Each axis is treated like a magnet attracting the respective colors. On this particular axis of colors, each color is attracted towards the other in a way so that the black axis will attract dark colors, the axis of yellow colors will attract green shades, and so on. 2. "Blue-Red Axis of Colors" - This axis displays subtle differences in colors between red and blue regions of the color cube. Colorful animation of the color cubes and axes with sound is included in this screen saver. The screen saver is included in the standard bundle. In order to install it, click on the "Add" button at the bottom of the screen saver entry window. Choose the Colored Cube Screensaver and click on the "Install" button. SPECIAL THANKS: Colored Cube Developers Liz Sporen Liz Sporen was able to draw this masterpiece on her own with the help of Colored Cube. This is Colored Cube, the magic display of the three primary colors red, green and blue, and the three additive primaries yellow, cyan and magenta. In order to evaluate the nuclear imaging ability of 99Tc-RBC-labeled autologous RBC, the kinetics of 99Tc-RBC in the spleen were evaluated by the direct and indirect methods. A gamma camera equipped with a multidetector was used for the measurement of 99Tc-RBC in the spleen. Dynamic measurements were performed until 24 hr. The results are summarized as follows: 1. A decrease of 99Tc-RBC was observed by both the direct and indirect methods in the spleen. 2. The radioactivity accumulated in the spleen at 4 hr after the injection of 99Tc-RBC by the direct method was approximately 2.5 times higher than that by the indirect method. 3. The radioactivity rapidly cleared from the spleen by 10 hr. The results indicate that 99Tc-RBC-labeled autologous RBC is useful as a splenic
